

National Assembly Joint Programme

Support to an Effective Lao National Assembly Joint Programme

Programme Description

In this four-year joint programme six UN Agencies and other development partners join hands to enhance the effectiveness and efficiency of the National Assembly of the Lao PDR. The programme will support the National Assembly to further strengthen its legislative, oversight and representational capacity through initiatives targeted for assembly members, the committees, their support staff, and the assembly secretariat.

In 2007 the Lao government started exploring the option of re-establishing Local Councils and initial support was provided for study tours to the Philippines and China to study the design of and experiences with local councils in these countries. The project component on supporting the fact-finding and decision-making process for a possible re-establishment of local councils has three objectives, namely (1) to assess the rationale for establishing local councils (2) to clarify various options with regard to scope of competencies, level of devolution, institutional organization and operational system of the local council, and (3) to determine the steps for establishing local councils, which is detailed in a road map. A comprehensive options paper on the re-introduction of the councils has been formulated with technical assistance provided by UNDP and is now being disseminated by the National Assembly to all relevant stakeholders.

Main Objectives and Activities in 2009

- Improved co-ordination between the legislature and the executive in legislative and oversight processes
- A more substantial involvement of the legislature in legislative process, including procedures on signing and ratifying international treaties to be developed;
- Better in-house flow of information;
- Strengthening of the committee system with clear guidelines and increased capacity for oversight and scrutiny;
- More involvement of the legislature in the budgetary process (adoption and oversight), including a gender perspective;
- Increased public awareness of the legislature, through enhanced openness in the NA proceedings (public access to bills and reports, etc.) and modernized communication networks;
- Improved citizens' representation and streamlined handling of public petitions.
- Setting up of an ombudsman-like office in the NA;
- Increased participation and interest of the citizens in the electoral process; and
- Strengthening of the human resource base at the National Assembly secretariat
